

Master of Arts in Human Services

The Master of Arts in Human Services (MAHS) provides a broad exploration of individual and systemic issues, needs and solutions applicable in a variety of contexts in social service, education, nonprofit business and other venues. Graduates are equipped to assess and provide support services to people in need.

Highlights

- Choose from a flexible online or blended format that combines the best of on-site and online learning.
- Get equipped to serve specific populations through a concentration in Family Studies.
- Gain a unique perspective to see how faith and human services intersect.
- Develop expertise in designing and evaluating human services programs.
- Use research to facilitate the understanding of people and their needs.
- Build a human services philosophy built on biblical ethics and a Christian worldview.

Career opportunities

The MAHS is a non-licensure degree that will prepare you for roles in a variety of settings, such as:

- Public health
- Law enforcement
- Community Education
- Ministry
- Child & Family Advocacy
- Student affairs
- Behavioral health
- Family Service Agencies

Note: Roles in some settings may require additional education or training.
